St. Albert Skating Rink News

The prospects are for another successful skating season this winter. While waiting for the appointment of a caretaker, the C. P. and Hockey Clubs have already ready the basic ice preparation, so that the rink will be ready for use by the end of the second week in November.

The Rink Committee has met twice, with a good attendance of representatives from its twelve constituent organizations. From these the following officers have been elected: president, Father Lahorte; vice-president, Mr. Raoul; secretary, Mrs. Cuts; treasurer, Constable Riley.

Mrs. Vogue will once more act as rink membership salesman; and Meridi Lavoie has been appointed caretaker.

Hockey teams, private clubs and other groups renting the rink for any purpose are notified that the treasurer, Constable Riley, and no other, will receive rental payments. Likewise all bills must be certified by him before presentation to the town council for payment.

A grand opening of the rink is planned one week after ice is declared ready — an evening of free skating and dancing for both children and grownups.

In the meantime skaters may obtain memberships from Mrs. Vogue so that no valuable time may be lost! The rink schedule, at present being drafted will be much the same as last year.

Residents of the district who are upset about the appearance and inconvenience of the present waiting room will be pleased to learn that plans are being mooted for a new building; probably with access to the concession booth. There is good news for the Hockey Players too — they will soon have a more comfortable dressing room, affording a good window view of the rink.

Middle East Debt to Britain

Much is being made of Britain's faults in anti-British publications in the United States and countries behind the Iron Curtain of Soviet domination. British colonial policy over the past years is pictured as cruel and selfish, which is a deliberate misrepresentation. Whatever faults individual governors of British colonies have been guilty of in past decades, the policy of Britain has been beneficial to the backward countries it has ruled. British policy has been one of gradual preparation for self-government of native peoples wherever the flag has been flown. That is why India received her independence, why the great dominions of the Commonwealth have been created out of former colonies. The same thing is true in the Middle East, where British industry, engineering skill and governmental genius has had sway.

Today Persia, known as Iran, is taking advantage of the difficulties under which Britain is laboring, by claiming her right to her national resources. While such a claim is within the national rights of Iran, it should not be forgotten by critics of British policy that Iran owes a tremendous debt to Britain for the development of these latent resources. Iran could not and never would develop them alone.

Another country that owes Britain a great debt of gratitude is Egypt. It was under British approval and help that Egypt won her liberation from the enslavement of the Turkish empire, and since that day it has been British wealth and engineering enterprise that has developed Egypt's independence. If the Sudan today is a prize for Egypt to covet, it is because British gold, blood and labor has made of a desert country a prosperous and contented people.

Monuments to British colonial policy and its great benefits are there for the world to see. In the Sudan at the Upper Nile town of Assuan, where the great Assuan dam is located. Built by British engineers and completed in 1902 at a cost of 25,560-million dollars, this dam, with its capacity of 2,120-million cubic metres, holds the waters of the Upper Nile back until flood time comes around when vast territories of barren land are made fruitful by its 180 sluice gates being opened.

Well might the greedy and inefficient Egyptian government covet control of the Sudan. But the Sudanese themselves, who finally ended their hatred of Britain at the Battle of Atbara in 1898, when Lord Kitchener avenged the murder of General Gordon by the Dervishes, are opposed to the Egyptian rule and enjoy the prosperity of British rule, which will soon end, they know, in self-government and nationhood.

What Is Free Enterprise?

The Alberta Wheat Pool, in their November 9th news budget, pans the Canadian Chamber of Commerce on its preaching for continuance of "free enterprise" in Canada. It suggests the Chamber give the people of Canada a clear definition of free enterprise. Whether one agrees with the Wheat Pool's arguments or not, points raised do merit serious thought.

Does free enterprise mean that the match manufacturers, the bakers, the glass companies, optical manufacturers, and other such people are justified in getting together to maintain monopoly prices?

Does it mean the manufacturer can fix the retail price for his product and compel a local merchant to sell his goods not below such a level, with a penalty of non-supply if such a price is not maintained?

Does it mean that a professional man in one Canadian province cannot practice in another without paying an exorbitant fee and undergoing another examination?

Does it mean that Canadian cotton goods manufacturers, for instance, must have high tariff protection in order to stay in business?

Does it mean that the Canadian branch of an American automobile manufacturing company must obtain a higher price for a product manufactured in Windsor, Ontario, than is obtained by the same company for a product manufactured across the river in Detroit?

Wasn't it Socrates who used to insist on his opponents in debate "defining their terms?"

The Canadian Chamber of Commerce certainly should give an explicit definition of what it means by "free enterprise."

Churchill's Heavy Task

The new British government, headed by Winston Churchill, has stepped into one of the most difficult positions to confront any government. Its task is all the more difficult because of the fact that its over-all majority in parliament is only a little bigger than that the former Labor government had. There are things to be accomplished that only a determined and strong government can do. Some things will have to be dealt with more tenderly than a government with a big majority would need to demonstrate.

Some idea of the problems before the Churchill cabinet may be gathered from a survey of the headlines in the daily press. They include such statements as: Narrow Churchill Majority Leaves Britain Uncertain; Churchill Victory Demands Care in U.K. Relation With U.S.; British Division Sails For Middle East; Iran Dispute to Come Before U.N.—and, if these are not enough, a glimpse at the internal difficulties in British national life should convince everyone that Churchill has taken over a tremendously heavy task.

More Hatching Eggs Needed

The demand in Alberta for baby chicks this past season far exceeded the supply and it looks as though the 1952 spring hatching season will bring even greater demands. There is a shortage of Alberta-produced hatching eggs, and in spite of high commercial egg price producers can get still higher returns from their eggs by producing hatching eggs.

According to F. J. Higginson, Acting Poultry Commissioner for Alberta, more producers with high quality flocks should consider getting them approved. Requirements consist mainly of efficient management and differ very little from practices that should be followed by all egg producers.

Alberta needs more hatching eggs—and Alberta farmers and poultrymen should produce them.

A Power in Everyday Life

All of us have heard, from time to time, that soldiers and sailors, in the face of death in the service of their country, have meekly turned to God, seeking help from their Creator in the hour of their agonizing need.

Many of these men have not been actively connected with religious organizations. Obviously, so far as they were concerned, the church meant little or nothing. Apparently, there is an opportunity for church leaders to do a little thinking on their own about the why of this attitude.

Why should an individual have to face death and suffering to experience the power of salvation? Plainly, because no one has made plain to him, or her, the full meaning of religion as a source of constant power in everyday living.

The Bible Today:

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void and darkness covered the face of the deep.—Genesis 1, 1 and 2.

Note and Comment

A unique tribute paid to Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip by the Fourth Estate is the Royal Visit issue of the Sapperton (B.C.) Review. Two pages—front and back—are printed in Royal purple ink and a special message inset in gold. We think Publisher Wm. McCafferty should mail a copy of his paper to Clarence House.

FBI Director J. Edgar Hoover has just received a 20-page letter in which the writer went into a long dissertation on the relationship between crime and the seasons of the year.

The writer said he knew Mr. Hoover would appreciate knowing of his theories on crime.

"You may not be able to find the time to reply to me," he wrote, "but you will continue to hear from me because I have nothing else to do in this place."

The return address was that of Washington's largest mental institution.

PANS OFFICIALDOM

Dear Sir—I have just reached the Pacific Coast after a trip from Ottawa during which I followed in the footsteps of Their Royal Highnesses, Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip. I remained in most of the principal cities of Manitoba, Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia just long enough, and met sufficient persons in trying to do a public relations job (I travelled everywhere by air), that I could reach at least a surface conclusion about the immediate reaction to the Royal Visit.

Everywhere it was the same story: criticism about officialdom monopolizing the attention of the two Royal visitors to such an extent that the general public was lucky to catch a glimpse of the heir to the throne and her consort. If a lieutenant-governor or some other official did not have his face obscuring the view, his wife did. The official car travelled at such speed the thousands who lined the streets—often for hours—would have had as much chance of "getting acquainted" with the appearance of royalty as if their automobile had been jet powered. If their Royal Highnesses on return to England have any criticism about the generosity of applause they should take it to consideration that the average man was not given an opportunity to work up his enthusiasm.

I tell you this because while I was in Edmonton your "open" letter to the Princess was drawn to my attention. I wished you to know that conditions of which you complained were not peculiar to the Alberta capital.

Your letter expressed the opinion of the less articulate subjects of His Majesty.

I admire your courage for saying what should be said. This is my criticism of Princess Elizabeth and Prince Philip but of the red tape and official desire for cudos which we, as democratic Canadians had, up to now, thought was at a minimum in our country.

PREFERRED RISKS

Dear Sir—Why doesn't some insurance company in Canada sell auto insurance policies only to non-drinking teetotal drivers? The rate for sober drivers should be half that for drunks. Why should I have to pay for drinking drivers' accidents?

NON DRINKER.

INFLATION'S TARGET

Dear Sir—Being that wages, taxes and even bus fares and all other living costs are being raised, how about similar rates for distressed veterans and widows? Nearly all government employees get good wages, wage increases and cost-of-living bonus. Well, how about it, Government leaders?

SAYS WE'RE RIGHT

Dear Sir—I have read Mr. Poe's letter to Princess Elizabeth about the Royal tour, and I think the same about it as you do. I read the Legal Record every week and like it fine. I am sure there are a lot more who feel the same about things as you do. I am a veteran, served overseas and know the whole story.

REQUEST FROM IOWA

Dear Sir—Would you please send me a copy of your letter to Princess Elizabeth in The Edmonton Sun Oct. 23. I read it in a copy sent to a friend here, and consider it a masterpiece. Although born in Michigan, my parents were Canadians and I guess quite some Canadian blood seeps through my veins.

"BEST EVER"

Dear Sir—I would like to say that Mr. Poe's open letter to Princess Elizabeth is the best piece he has ever written. This letter should have greater circulation than even your own papers can give it.

PIONEERS TO COMPILE AN EARLY FAMILY HISTORY OF PROVINCE

Closely linked with the history of Southern Alberta are the names of a host of pioneer families that are gradually fading into oblivion along with the horse and buggy.

These families settled in the West long before railroads made their appearance, when there were as many Indians as there were settlers and none had an inkling of the wealth in natural resources that lay hidden under the rolling prairies. And their names have never been set down in official records.

It's quite likely they never would have been, either, if the Southern Alberta Pioneer and Old Timers Association at the annual meeting a year ago had not decided that something should be done before all chances of obtaining the old timers' records had disappeared.

It was with the idea of evolving a plan to collect this history up to and including the year 1890 that Douglas Hardwick, himself a pioneer, was persuaded to become president of the association for the present year.

With this major objective in mind, a committee was set up which developed a plan for gathering together this history.

The mechanics of this plan are simple: Just one member of each pioneer family must fill out a special questionnaire form and send it to the director of the nearest district. The aforementioned forms may be obtained at the larger post offices in Southern Alberta, local old-timers' associations, or by writing any director.

But the problem of finding relatives and descendants of these pioneer families is the difficult part.

The form is primarily interested in all data prior to and including, 1890 as pertaining to the "pioneer period."

In an effort to gather the records of these pioneer families in Southern Alberta, which district extends from Red Deer south to the U.S. border, a central research committee was formed by the Southern Alberta Pioneer and Old Timers Association, under the chairmanship of Mr. Hardwick.

Included in the committee are Miss Mary Pinkham, O.B.E.; J. E. A. MacLeod, K.C.; Alex. McTavish; W. J. Wilde, and honorary secretary, Leishman McNeill. They will be helped by a group of 22 well-known directors, each responsible for a district and for its local organization. Mr. Hardwick wishes it made perfectly clear that the forms, when completed, should be sent to the director of the nearest district, not the nearest director.

The history of each pioneer family will be woven, year by year, into the contemporary history of the country. When completed, it is hoped that copies will be placed in local museums, principal colleges and public libraries where they will be easily accessible for reference to present and future generations wishing to know the past connection of their families with the building of their country.

These histories and records will not be used for any commercial purposes whatever, and if ever published will be available to all at cost price.

The committee hopes that all will assist in this voluntary effort to save the fast disappearing record of the past, and that no pioneer family of Southern Alberta will allow its name and history to be missed by failure to secure and send in a form.

The following are some of the names of the different districts and their directors:

New Booklet Stresses Importance Of Forests

The importance of Alberta's forests is the theme of a new illustrated booklet, "Alberta Forests," prepared by the Department of Lands and Forests and the Publicity Branch of the Department of Economic Affairs.

In a forward the Minister of Lands and Forests appeals to all citizens to prevent forest fires and maintain Alberta's forested areas as a source of timber and a home for wild life. "Without our forests, Alberta would be a desert," the minister states.

The booklet has been prepared to give Alberta citizens and school children authentic and accurate information on forestry in Alberta. The conservation policies and practices of the Alberta Forestry Service are outlined and other chapters deal with the economic importance of forests, fire and insect damage and conservation and reforestation.

The last pages deal with the species of trees growing in Alberta and include a map of forest areas. Copies of the booklet may be obtained from the Department of Land and Forests, Administration Building, Edmonton.

Edmonton Scientists Cure Barley Smut, Tackle Butter Canning

An inexpensive, simple control for barley smut was discovered recently in Edmonton by Dr. L. E. Tyner, plant pathologist with the Canada Department of Agriculture.

The chemical treatment, if used by all prairie barley producers, could save millions of bushels of barley from loss.

The chemical, which has been under test at Edmonton, Saskatoon, and Winnipeg experimental laboratories, has been found almost 100 per cent efficient. Only in one case did the treatment fail to remove all traces of smut, 0.2 per cent remained.

Edmonton, with the new discovery requires that seed barley be soaked 10 hours in water, and then for 48 hours in a two per cent solution of the chemical. The water-soaking is done to soften the kernel and aid in the change of seed into the embryo where the smut grows.

Dr. Tyner estimates that the cost of treatment will be about 20 cents a bushel, as compared to the only alternative method, which costs usually over $1.00 a bushel.

The old method, which will be made obsolete by Dr. Tyner's discovery, was performed with a centrally located treating machine, and involved delicate control of time and temperature.

Dr. Tyner's method can be performed in a barrel.

Besides Montclair barley in his experiments, Dr. Tyner used Newall, Titan, Plush and Glacier property by Harry Hunter and Eva May Hunter.—Carried.

varieties. The treatment was equally effective with all types.

Another Edmonton man, F. W. Wood, of the University of Alberta, is seeking a method of packaging butter for shipment to distant points. Needs of northern travellers, and the navy, army and airforce have riveted attention to the problem, and the Dominion government has given the university a grant to pay the costs of research.

A method of canning butter has for some time been used in northern areas by trappers and prospectors, and more recently by the armed forces.

However, too few people realized that canning butter does not protect it from the growth of micro-organisms as in the case of other foods. Sterilization and other processes that are used in canning, most canned goods cannot be applied to butter.

"Although we have conducted our research for only five months," states Mr. Wood, who is assistant professor of dairying at the university, "the research indicates that a satisfactory method can be found for preserving butter by means of a canning process."

Normally, canned butter will remain in a palatable state as long as 36 months. It shows a pronounced tendency to deteriorate when subjected to extreme temperatures, such as in the tropics. Principal defects were rancidity due to bacterial and oxidative causes, and an objectional physical condition caused by melting.

Resources May Make Alberta Tax Free

Premier Manning said recently at a meeting of Alberta Association of Municipal Districts, that it was "not at all beyond the realms of possibility that Alberta would not only be the only oil free province, but the only tax free province in Canada."

The premier pointed out that oil revenue alone in the last 3½ years had poured $115,000,000 into the treasury and added to the present rate of acceleration continue, a tax free Alberta is not too visionary.

Mr. Manning outlined a plan to rebuild the Municipal system, which would include the consideration of size, population and industry. He stated that financial stability in forming the District. He added that the Province will pay about $25,750,000 in grants to municipalities and schools this year, and that this must be substantially increased.

He also stated that it was not only a few small groups that benefited from Alberta's oil revenue, but also all citizens as it allows the province to undertake more aid to schools and municipalities without an increase in taxes.

Cape Disappointment in southwest Washington was so named as a reminder of the failure of early English and Spanish navigators to discover the mouth of the Columbia River.

The Lighter Side

A Doctor's Dilemma

A new doctor was the only one available when Mr. Kelly's wife was taken ill. Called to the Kelly home, he went upstairs to the sick room but came down in a few minutes to inquire, "Have you got a screwdriver?" He took the instrument and went upstairs for the second time.

Several minutes later he was back again. "Got a screwdriver?" he asked the anxious Kelly. In strident hand, he went up stairs again.

Almost immediately he was back. "A chisel and mallet, quickly," he demanded.

The distraught husband could stand it no longer. "For Heaven's sake, doctor," he begged, "what's the matter with my wife?"

"Don't know yet," was the reply: "can't get my medicine bag open."

Now She Knows

"Is this the speedometer?" asked the pretty girl, tapping the glass with her finger.

"Yes, dear," he replied.

"And that's the clutch?"

"That's the clutch, darling," he said, jamming on his brakes to avoid a fast approaching truck.

"But what on earth is this?" she inquired at the same time giving the accelerator a vigorous push with her foot.

"This, dear," he said, in a soft celestial voice, "is Heaven." And picking up a harp he flew away.

Tough on Men

Life is cruel to men. When they're born, their mothers get compliments and flowers; when they get married, the bride gets presents and publicity; and when they die, their wives get the insurance and the winters in Florida.

By Himself

The class had been given a rather difficult sum to do for homework and, strange to relate, Tommy, the dunce of the class, was the only one with the correct answer.

"Did your brother help you with this, Tommy?" asked the teacher. "No, ma'am," replied Tommy truthfully. "He did it alone."

Letter to Louisa

Dear Louisa,—
I am thirty years old and plan to be married this winter. My fiancée is a widow without children.

Now my problem is this. I have been working for ten years and like my work. I plan to keep my job, although this is not necessary from a financial standpoint. My fiancée does not object except for the reason that his business is fifty miles away, which means a long ride each day or being away from home a part of each week.

Do you think we will have a great chance for happiness with this arrangement or should I give up my job? I am afraid I shall be bored with nothing to do,
M. Y. L.

Answer:

I think you will have a greater chance for happiness if you give up your job and go with your husband. As for not having anything to do, I am sure that you will find much more to do than you realize if you try to make a pleasant home for your husband to come to after his day's work.

Since you say that finances do not enter into the picture, there in their mates. There is much less to be gained if you do find time hanging heavy on your hands. Another thing is that time is money. If you plan to have a family and no woman, unless she is obliged to, should leave her small children all day with paid workers.

Agricultural Federation President Is Worried About Canadian Beef Market

PETERBOROUGH, Ont. — H. H. Hannam, president of the Canadian Federation of Agriculture, was guest speaker at a meeting of the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce and county federation of agriculture. During his address he stated an embargo against the shipment of Canadian meat to the United States would bring "tragedy" to livestock men and "disaster" to the country, and criticized such a proposal, made in the commons. He described it as "one of the most foolish" that could be put forward by a Canadian.

"To close the United States border against beef going across from Canada would in no time cause a glut on Canadian markets.

"To do this in the face of today's very high costs of production would break the price of beef to the place where it would be a tragedy for all livestock men and could not help but undermine many businesses and many payrolls, as well."

The suggestion was made in the commons by Leon Balcer, Prog. Cons., Trois Rivières, last Monday during the debate on the speech from the throne. Mr. Balcer said that as long as the government allows meat to be

Careless Handling Of Weed Seeds And Screenings

It is an unusual sight at this time of the year on the snow-covered fields, in the crisp wintery air to see threshing crews dressed in parkas, mackinaw coats, fur caps and warm mitts pitching grain bundles into the threshing machine.

Great hardships are faced among these unfortunate farmers that still have their crops standing out in the fields; greater problems are in store for the community next year if proper precautions are not taken this year. It's cold and miserable; those weeds and screenings left out on the field at the site of the threshing machine are a major threat to the farmer as long as the grain is stored. How long are we going to produce grain if we continue with such practices? Careless handling of weed seeds and screenings following a year's hard work to control weeds doesn't make sense. The farmer has enough worries without trying to keep up with weed growth from seeds scattered to the four winds.

The Noxious Weeds Act provides that all weed seeds and screenings stored, moved, sold or otherwise disposed of shall be handled safely. If you are feeding screenings make sure that they are fed within an enclosed feed lot approved by a weed inspector. Screenings in storage must be kept in buildings, bins, or other containers so constructed that there is no danger of the weed seeds leaking out and spreading around. If you intend to transport screenings stay within the law by first obtaining a permit from your field supervisor.
